It’s a great time to be here, as we celebrate the 25th anniversary of The National Forest.

The first trees were planted in 1991, marking the start of this, the biggest, boldest environmental project in the country.

The Forest area spans 200 square miles of Leicestershire, Derbyshire and Staffordshire, and had been chosen just a few months earlier to be the site of an ambitious new multi-purpose forest for the nation. It was to be near where people live and work, and would use the trees to bring about improvements to the economy, to the quality of life for people who live here and to the environment. Local communities and supporters nationwide were eager to get planting!

The area was chosen to link the ancient forests of Charnwood in the east and Needwood in the west and also to help repair the damage left to the environment and local communities by the closure of the Midlands coalfield. The landscape would be transformed by planting trees to create a mosaic of farmland, industry, transport corridors, towns and villages, open space – all framed by woodland.
Almost eight and a half million trees later, we have created hundreds of woodlands, using primarily native broadleaf species such as oak and birch, more than trebling the forest cover from a meagre 6 per cent in the early 1990s to 20 per cent in 2015.

In what was once one of the country’s least wooded regions, the National Forest Company and its partners are increasing forest cover with ambition and imagination, creating habitats for wildlife, a woodland economy and a beautiful landscape for people to enjoy.

Many of the routes in the National Forest Walking Festival include villages and locations that were once part of the mining landscape – a massive transformation that has seen the central part of the Forest turn from black to green!

If you fancy a longer walk, the 75-mile long National Forest Way is a great way to explore the varied landscapes throughout The National Forest: www.nationalforestway.co.uk

The future’s looking bright, leafy and green for The National Forest, well beyond this its first quarter century. If you would like to get involved and support The National Forest, plant a tree with us, or help look after woodlands, find out more at www.nationalforest.org
Stay and Enjoy the National Forest

Why not turn your National Forest Walking Festival experience into a holiday or mini break and book somewhere to stay in the area. With a wide range of accommodation from the YHA National Forest to a homely farmhouse or a spacious forest lodge, there is something to cater for every taste and budget.

With so many pubs, restaurants, cafes and tearooms in the area, you’ll be spoilt for choice for where to go after you’ve enjoyed your walk.

“I just love the Festival with all its variety and opportunities to learn.”
