USAAF AIRFIELDS Guide and Map

Introduction

During the Second World War, the East of England became home to hundreds of US airmen. They began arriving in 1942, with many existing RAF (Royal Air Force) airfields made available to the USAAF (United States Army Air Force). By 1943 there were over 100,000 US airmen based in Britain. The largest concentration was in the East of England, where most of the 8th Air Force and some of the 9th were located on near a hundred bases. The 8th Air Force was the largest air striking force ever committed to battle, with the first units arriving in May 1942. The 9th Air Force was re-formed in England in October 1943 - it was the operator of the most formidable troop-carrying force ever assembled.

Their arrival had an immediate impact on the East Anglian scene. This was the ‘friendly invasion’ - a time of jitterbugging dances and big band sounds, while the British got their first taste of peanut butter, chewing gum and Coke. Famous US bandleader Glenn Miller was based in the Bedford area (Bedfordshire), along with his orchestra during the Second World War. Close associations with residents of the region produced long lasting friendships, sometimes even marriage. At The Eagle pub in Cambridge (Cambridgeshire), and The Swan Hotel at Lavenham (Suffolk), airmen left their signatures on the ceiling/walls.

The aircraft of the USAAF were the B-17 Flying Fortress and B-24 Liberator - used by the Bombardment Groups (BG); and the P-51 Mustang, P-38 Lightning and P-47 Thunderbolt - used by the Fighter Groups (FG). Bassingbourn (Cambridgeshire) was the wartime home of the famous 'Memphis Belle' - the first B-17 to complete her tour of duty during World War II. At the Imperial War Museum at Duxford (Cambridgeshire), look out for ‘Sally B’ the only airworthy Flying Fortress in the UK. It forms part of the superb ‘American Air Museum’, which stands as a memorial to the 30,000 Americans who died flying from the UK in the Second World War. This building houses a unique collection of US aircraft (past and present),

With the end of the Second World War, the RAF and USAAF were once again reduced to a peace-time level, and many of the wartime sites were closed down, leaving the more permanent pre-war airfields to be developed for the post-war air force. Today visitors can discover many of the old airfields - which have found new uses or have been returned to agricultural land. Many have been identified by special signs set alongside the road, some have memorials to past squadrons, others have original control towers which have been lovingly restored with displays and exhibitions. At Cambridge (Cambridgeshire) you can visit the only Second World War American military cemetery and memorial in Britain. Whilst at Norwich (Norfolk), there is the Second Air Division Memorial Library of the 8th Air Force - housed in The Forum.
